The SFY 2016-2017 funding of $1,798,869 will permit the new construction for enhanced educational instructional space with a versatile 10,056gsf art gallery, lecture hall or classroom at the Anna Lamar Switzer Center for Visual Arts. The total estimated cost stands at $3,042,307. The C.W. Lamar Gallery wing will serve as a multiuse space with increased capacity for classes, events and lectures. The College will offer a regional arts center that is projected to draw 104,000 community members each year. The center's dual-use instructional space will increase capacity from 100 to 300 people seated lecture style. The proposed architectural design includes a 200 seat lecture hall with walls that open up into the exhibition space creating room for an additional 100 seats. This increased capacity also provides the opportunity to repurpose existing space into working labs for both the graphic design and photography programs. A previous expansion in 2000 allowed for an increase student enrollment by 142% and this new expansion will allow for continued increases in programs like graphic design.
